

Learning colors develops in stages. First are matching colors, second is pointing to colors and the third stage is being able to name colors.

Activities to Help Your Child Learn Colors

- Name colors all day long.
- Pick a Color of the Day and point out that color throughout the day and wear clothes of that color.
- Play "I Spy" Color Game and have your child find the color you spy.
- Color Matching Game- hold up a colored toy and have your child find a toy of the same color.
- Read Books about Colors- name the colors in the book and ask your child to point to colors in the book.

Thank you to PoWeR! Book Bags
for the generous donation of this book.
www.powerbookbags.org

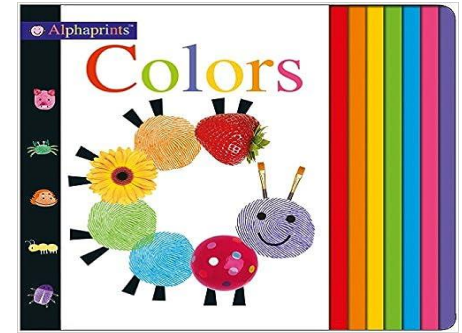

Learning colors develops in stages. First are matching colors, second is pointing to colors and the third stage is being able to name colors.

Activities to Help Your Child Learn Colors

- Name colors all day long.
- Pick a Color of the Day and point out that color throughout the day and wear clothes of that color.
- Play "I Spy" Color Game and have your child find the color you spy.
- Color Matching Game- hold up a colored toy and have your child find a toy of the same color.
- Read Books about Colors- name the colors in the book and ask your child to point to colors in the book.

Thank you to PoWeR! Book Bags
for the generous donation of this book.
www.powerbookbags.org

Learning colors develops in stages. First are matching colors, second is pointing to colors and the third stage is being able to name colors.

Activities to Help Your Child Learn Colors

- Name colors all day long.
- Pick a Color of the Day and point out that color throughout the day and wear clothes of that color.
- Play "I Spy" Color Game and have your child find the color you spy.
- Color Matching Game- hold up a colored toy and have your child find a toy of the same color.
- Read Books about Colors- name the colors in the book and ask your child to point to colors in the book.

Thank you to PoWeR! Book Bags
for the generous donation of this book.
www.powerbookbags.org